

DUAL LANGUAGE PROGRAM IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS, AND LANGUAGES SPOKEN AT HOME IN NYC

How many non-native English speakers are served by each dual language school program in their corresponding languages?

The map displays the locations of NYC public schools offering dual language programs color-coded by the language of instruction and outlined by their school district limits.

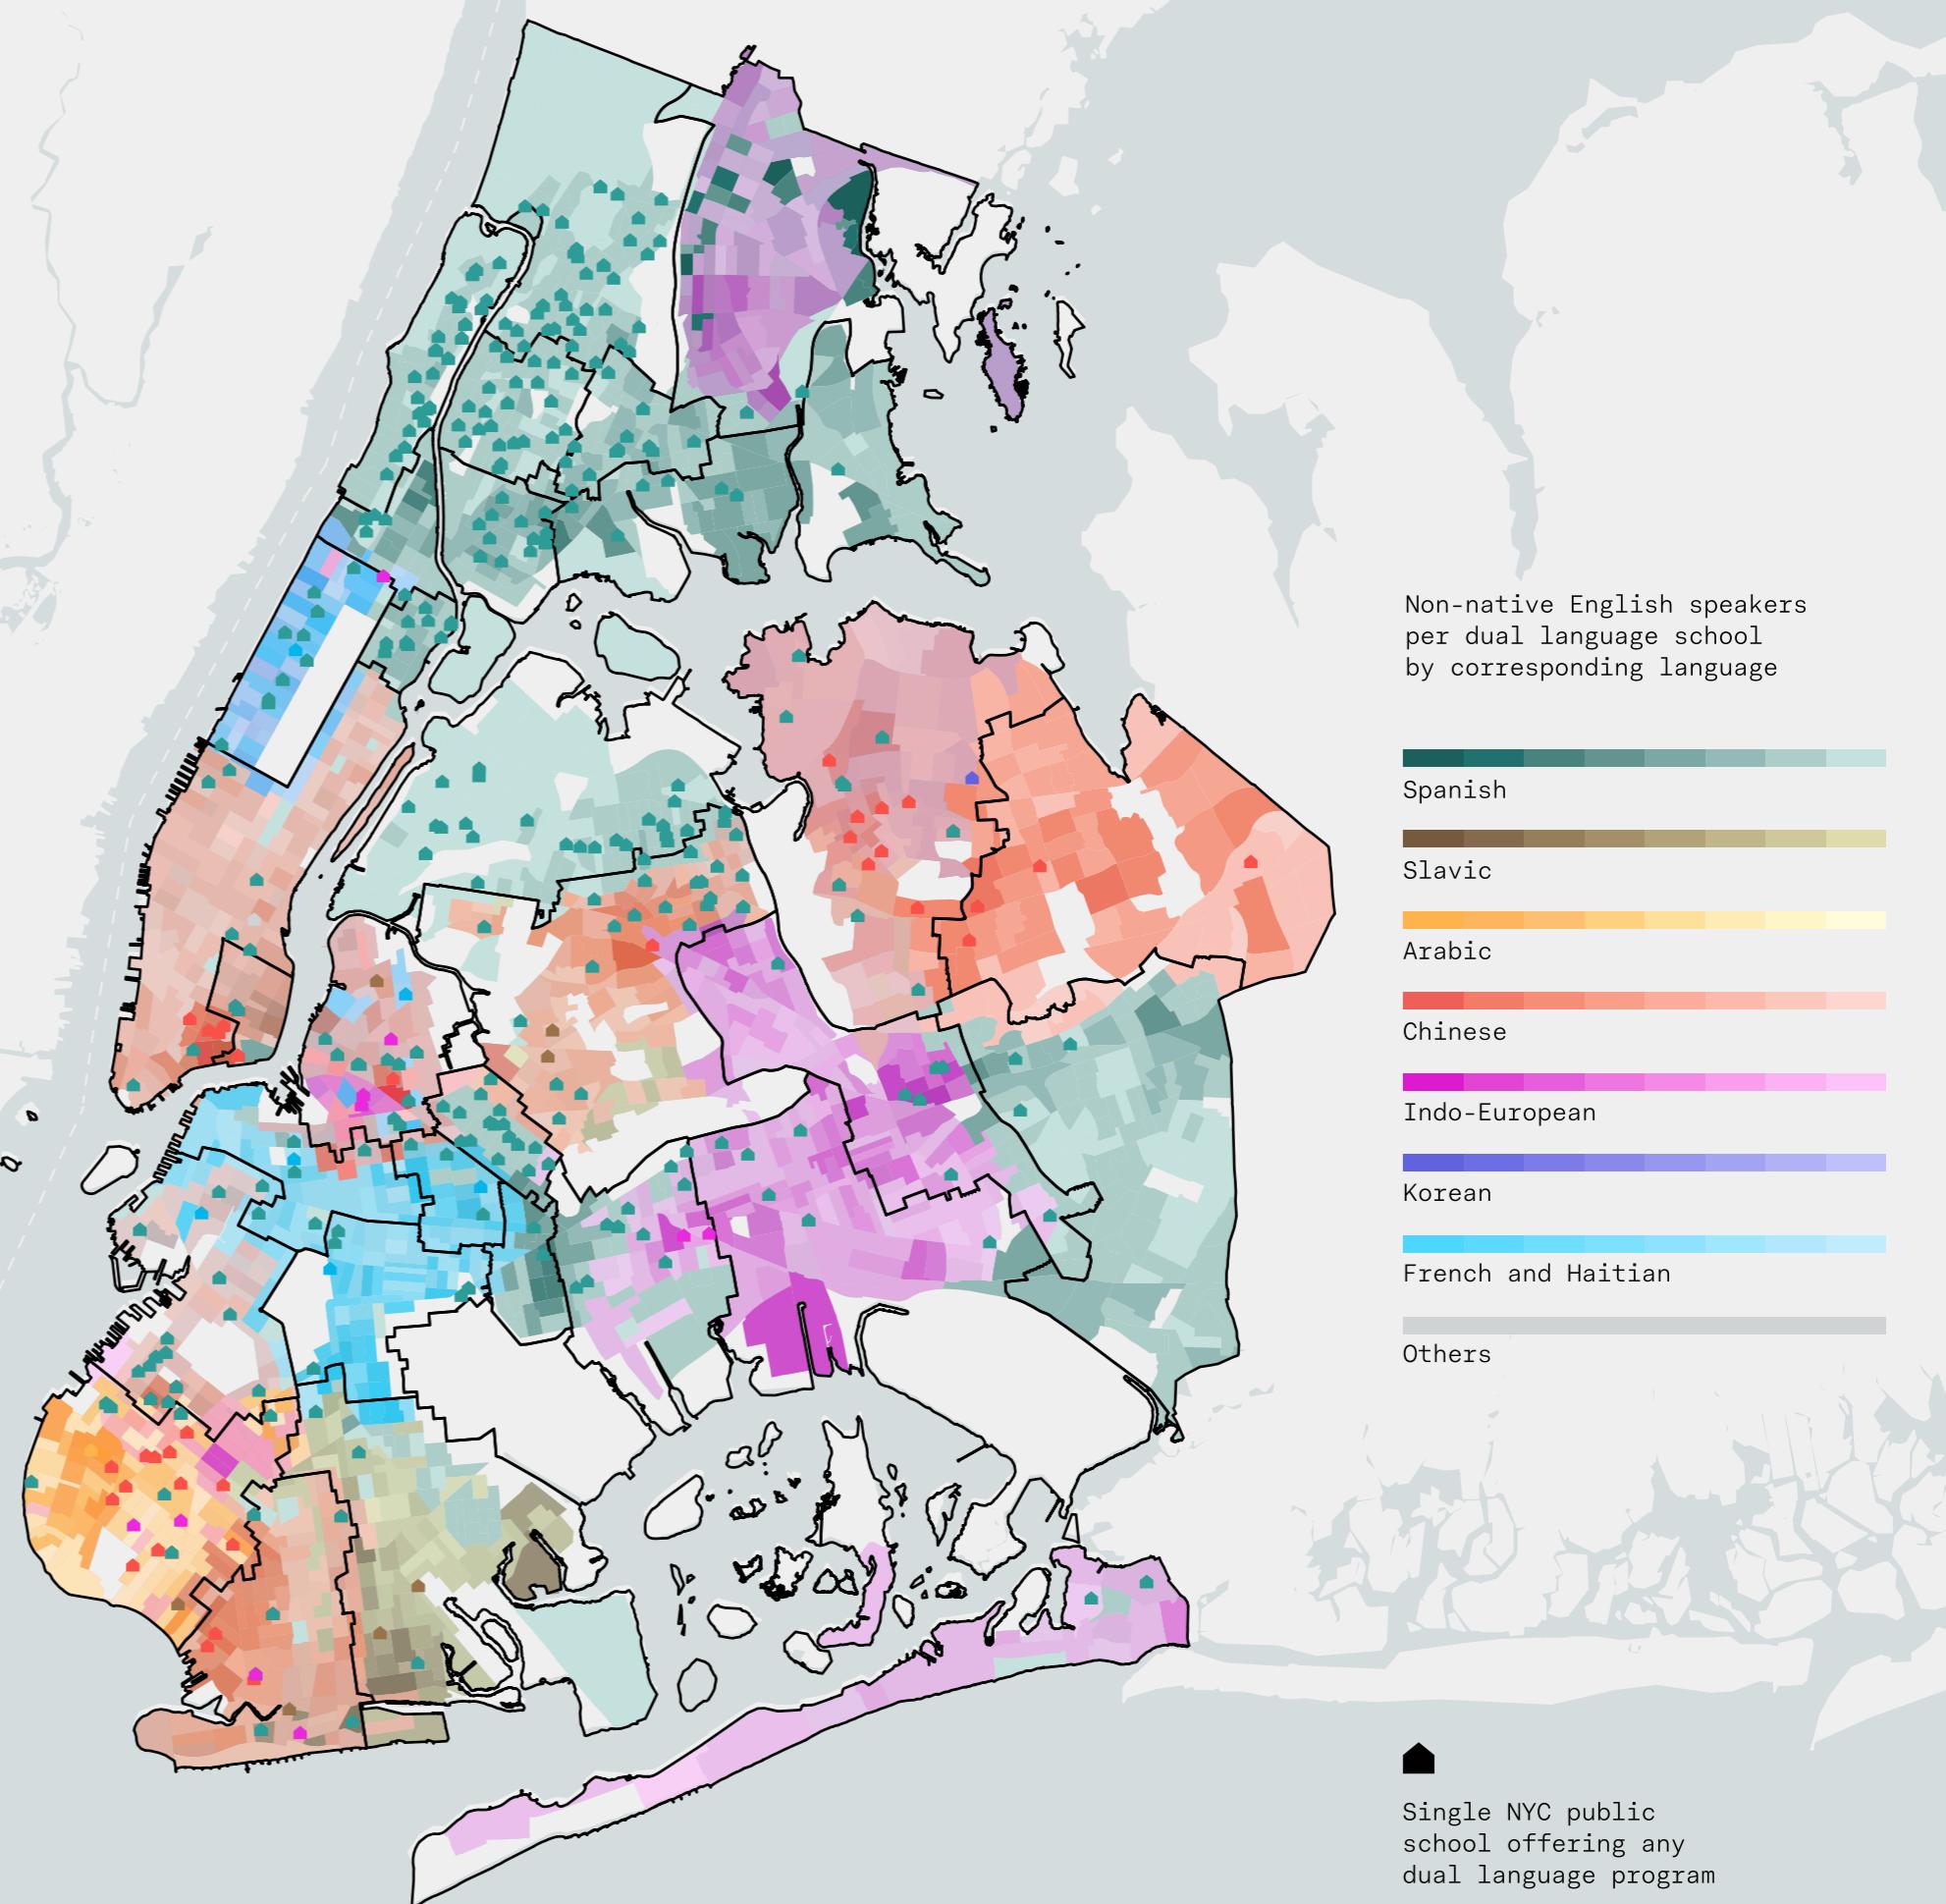

The gradient of colors represents the ratio between the number of non-native English speakers and the number of dual language programs offered in that language within each district.

Darker tones indicate a smaller ratio, meaning that, on average, each school serves a larger population of speakers of that same language.

Each school was assumed to serve its entire district. Both dual language and transitional bilingual education programs are included, from early childhood to high and secondary school. A few languages such as Italian, German, and Vietnamese were grouped for consistency across datasets.
